“A Healthy Policy is the Foundation of a Salutogenic Healthy Society.”

3 Questions for final Panel discussion

1. From treatment to prevention: What should governments and health systems change in policy to make the built environment a genuine part of public health?

2. How can we move from evidence to action — integrating Salutogenic Design into public health, healthcare, urban planning and architectural policy?

3. If healthy people and a healthy environment are the goal, what should a Healthy Policy look like for the next generation — and who must take responsibility for making it happen?

Conclusion;

“Can we achieve a Salutogenic Healthy Society without making health a fundamental principle of public policy and the built environment?”
